Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-7,9-16, and 18-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Nishizawa (6469593).

Nishizawa discloses in fig. 1A-1B and 3-15 a surface acoustic wave device comprising: a package (2) made of alumina ceramic and a plurality of metal bumps (7) made of metal disposed near any for corners of the bonding surface of the substrate (1).

Wherein, the rectangular shape piezoelectric substrate (1) has different linear thermal expansion coefficients located in two different directions of the bonding surface of the piezoelectric substrate (col.1-10); on which the plurality of metal bumps are provided.

Wherein, maximum distance (LZ) between the metal bumps arranged in one of the two different directions (in which the piezoelectric substrate and the package have a greater difference between the linear thermal expansion coefficients) is less than the maximum distance (LX) between the metal bumps arrange in the other direction (in which the piezoelectric substrate and the package have a smaller difference between the linear thermal expansion coefficients). Nishizawa also discloses in fig.7 at least three of the metal bumps disposed near any of the corners of the bonding surface and at least one of the metal bumps disposed in the approximate center of the bonding surface of the piezoelectric substrate.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 8 and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nishizawa in view of Furukawa (6262513).

Nishizawa substantially discloses the claim invention. However, Nishizawa does not disclose metal bumps made of solder.

Furukawa teaches surface acoustic wave device in fig.33 comprising: a surface acoustic device (3), a transducer (4) and a plurality of conductive bumps (6) made of solder for the purpose of electrically connecting the transducer to the circuit board.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made modify the SAW device of Nishizawa with the teaching of Furukawa for the purpose of providing an electronic device, which can work stably without the adverse effect of the ambient noise even in high frequency region.
